TOP NOTES

Noah Östlund made his AHL debut tonight, skating on a line with fellow first-round picks Jiri Kulich and Isak Rosén. With the recent addition of Östlund, the Amerks now have four former first-round draft picks in the lineup, which also includes rookie defenseman Ryan Johnson, who was Buffalo's 31st overall selection back in 2019.

With his second-period goal, Brandon Biro has now scored in back-to-back games for the first time all season while also extending his point streak to four games. The shorthanded goal was Biro's third of the season and 16th overall, which matches a career-high. He's the first Amerk to score three shorthanded goals in a season since Colin Blackwell in 2017-18.

Jeremy Davies also stretched his point streak to four games with his career-high 12th goal of the season. Three of his goals this year have come against Cleveland, including goals in each of the last two games against the Monsters.

Lukas Rousek assisted on Davies' second-period goal, giving him points in back-to-back games with Rochester since returning from the Buffalo Sabres on Monday. Rousek posted a season-long 13-game point streak earlier this season, the second-longest in the AHL.

With an assist, Graham Slaggert has five points (3+2) in his last seven games, including goals in back-to-back games over that span.

The Amerks close out the home portion of their season with an 18-12-4-2 record, including a 7-1-1-1 mark in their final 10 home contests.
